Café Jacques, a bucolic interlude in Paris

Nestled within the lush, private garden of the museum, Café Jacques provides a peaceful escape in the heart of the city. Designed by Aliénor Béchu from the Volume ABC agency, this modern café features white marble tables, tawny leather chairs, and a transparent design that allows for plenty of natural light. From its terrace, guests enjoy an uninterrupted view of the Eiffel Tower. This “hidden gem” with direct access to Gilles Clément’s landscaped garden is a perfect venue for group lunch.

The culinary experience

The menu at this contemporary café shines a spotlight on vegetables and fresh ingredients, most of which are sourced from Paris and the surrounding region.

Expect flavourful, generously prepared dishes, a breakfast offering, and an indulgent afternoon tea featuring a curated selection of Parisiennes — iconic French pastries — just a few highlights from a menu that’s as creative as it is varied.

Les Ombres, a rooftop oasis in the Parisian sky

Perched atop the museum, Les Ombres offers a panoramic view of the Eiffel Tower — its iron lacework casting shadows across the tablecloths by day and glowing spectacularly at night. Designed by Jean Nouvel, the glass-enclosed restaurant is an exceptional venue for upscale receptions, whether professional or personal dinners. In warm weather, the space opens onto a Mediterranean rooftop garden with a mixology bar and stunning views over Paris.

The culinary experience

Give in to a bold take on classic French gastronomy, freely inspired by the Mediterranean and grounded in a deep respect for top-quality ingredients. Flavours are bold, preparations are refined, and indulgence is always part of the experience.
